This policy system provides for active participation by and consultation with constituents or policy stakeholders who comprise the internal community of learners. Internal constituents of the College include students, staff, faculty and administrators.

The College defines participatory governance as a collaborative process that involves constituents or their representatives in policy development, implementation, and adjudication. Constituents are involved in the collection of data and dissemination of information related to significant policy issues confronting the College. Through the interactive policy system, constituents assist in developing recommendations to the Board of Governors on policy issues in accordance with the College's adopted mission, the shared vision, and values. Participatory governance provides for interaction among constituents designed to achieve a balance between stability and change essential to the College's advancement.

There are three basic component structures within the policy system: Administrative; Governance; and Adjudicative. Through the Administrative Structure (Section 1.5), constituents participate primarily in the implementation, execution and monitoring of policy. Policies are administered and monitored through the administrative structure. In general, the administration is responsible for overseeing and executing policy: "what is". Administration also monitors the efficacy of policies. Recommendations for policy changes and policy review are submitted through the appropriate governance team and to the President's Cabinet for final review processes. Function as a unit, speaking with one voice, which recognizes that the power of the Cabinet rests with the whole Cabinet, not individual members. One of the salient policy issues to be answered by the Administrative Structure is how to implement or administer the policy decision.

The internal governance structure is the primary policy development component of the policy system. It is through the governance structure that constituent groups participate in the debate of "what should be" and how the Board of Governors should respond to the policy issues confronting the College in the future.

The governance structure consists of teams focused on student learning outcomes and institutional effectiveness. These interdependent units represent constituents from all departments. The intent is to assure policy analysis and recommendations that examine the College as a whole rather than from the perspective of the various department units. The governance structure exists for primarily review and recommendation of student learning, policy, and college operations to the President for submission to the Board of Governors.

The third and equally important area of the policy system is the adjudicative structure. Through a system of hearing panels, constituents evaluate, on an individual-case basis, the degree to which the administrative structure has appropriately executed and interpreted the established policies. In general, representatives are selected to serve on these panels and are convened only when a challenge is brought by a constituent regarding the administration of a particular policy.

Two teams are established to function as the primary, first-level policy review and regulation development units. These teams advise the senior administrators who formulate policy and regulations. A senior administrator will serve as chair of the respective teams and provide support for ongoing tasks such as agendas, minutes, actual implementation of team actions, and annual reports. The teams are comprised of representatives of internal constituents.
